Far Hills Country Day School's Matthew Turner Named Recipient of Johns Hopkins Center for Talented Youth Award

Far Hills, NJ – Matthew Turner, an eighth-grade student at Far Hills Country Day School, has been awarded a scholarship for one course at Rutgers University–New Brunswick, in recognition of his outstanding performance on the SAT in the 2016 Johns Hopkins Center for Talented Youth (CTY) Search.

Son of David and Kimberly Turner of Lebanon, NJ, Matthew is involved at Far Hills as a Mathlete, goalie for the soccer team, and a contributor to the school's literary magazine, Collectors Items.

Director of the Upper School, Georgia Zaiser, said, "This honor clearly demonstrates Matthew's love of learning and inquisitive mind. He continues to impress his teachers with his intellect and curiosity. We are so proud of Matthew for achieving this high honor and look forward to his bright future."

The scholarship covers up to $1,200 in tuition, which pays for most 3-credit and 4-credit classes. The colleges and universities participating in CTY's One-Course Scholarship program donate the scholarships in order to encourage academic growth and to develop identified talent in highly able young students. CTY selects recipients based on their SAT or ACT scores and proximity to the donating institution.

Far Hills Country Day School is a PreK-Grade 8 independent school that is guided by a dual mission to provide each child brilliant beginnings for success in the modern world through academic excellence and character development. The school is situated on 54 acres in Far Hills, New Jersey. The campus includes learning gardens, age specific computer labs and media centers, a state-of-the-art Performing Arts Center, a large Athletics Center including a climbing wall, outdoor fields and tennis courts, a ropes course, meadows, ponds, and woodlands.
